Making the business case for love!

Leading a global community and consultancy committed to making workplaces more loving and human.

Renée Smith is founder and CEO of A Human Workplace, a global consultancy, movement, and community of practitioners and leaders committed to making work more loving and human. She is an award-winning executive, researcher, writer, and sought after speaker and podcast guest. Her human-centered message offers a new way to view work that disrupts 19th century industrial-era thinking. As a behavioral scientist with 20+ years of leadership experience, she makes a compelling case that love is good for people, businesses, and communities. She shares stories and insights from her primary research, her work as Director of Workplace Transformation for Washington State, and her practice as a coach, educator, and facilitator. She has been described as gutsy, bold, revolutionary, and radically kind.
